IN BETWEEN BECOMING 'ARTISTS' AND 'LABORERS' IN SEOUL

Hongdae, located in the western part of Seoul, became well-known as a place of subculture in the 1990s yet it has become an epitome of gentrification. Tracing the self-categorization of cultural workers in Hongdae for two decades, Dr. Cho proposes self-categorization as a site to observe the critical activity of ordinary people, a performative action of creating self-fulfilling prophecies for living in uncertainty.
